The casualties among the generals on our part, it will be seen, are somewhat numerous, and some of them were caused by our own mon. It would seem that much "mistakes" need not occur.

SEGNIFICANT.

There are many things transpiring just now which may be regarded as of much significance as well as omens of good to the Confedate cause. Not the least among these is the fact announced by telegraph from Dalton, yester-day, stating that numerous prisoners have come Chicago Times of the 19th ult., which says we I wish to give you only such reliable facts as your readinto our lines and given themselves up, saying that their time expires from the 10th to the 13th struct a fleel—that no amount of ill-luck or interests of the attention.

WAVERLY. of this month, and that none of them will fight in the approaching engagement.

This is corroborative of the suggestion thrown out by us some days ago, that the old troops in the Federal army, whose term of service is about expiring, and who have a near prospect of seeing "home, children and friends," will negroes and mercenary foreigners. They will negroes and moreomary foreignors. They will not fight, and their efficers will be both to go into an engagement with them. With such material to contend with, our brave and tried vetbers are such as fairly commenced, but, undaunted,

His motives and reasons for this are of course | time in the person of Mr. Dayton. Gen. Grant makes the fight be must win the victory. A failure would prove fatal to him as a military leader and presidential aspirant, as well as disestrous to his country and his cause. This being the delicate situation in which he is placed, he wants not only an overwhelming army, but he wants its favorite leaders. He knows that the troops composing the army of the Potomac the troops composing the army of the Potomac will higher as well under no other leader as McClellas. He is and has always been the idde of that army, and it has done very poor fighting since his removal. But there is another thought connected with this subject which may not be without its weight. This is regarded, on both paign which the North will make against the Jackson in a few days.
